

Tip 14 - Do not include un-necessary features

- Ensure that the product features you develop are going to be used by the majority of the users most of the time

- A woman with dark hair, wearing a bright yellow blazer over a white top, is seated at a wooden desk in a modern office. She is looking down at a computer mouse, with her hand resting on it. A large, silver computer monitor is positioned to her left. In the background, other desks and office equipment are visible, along with a ceiling featuring exposed pipes and several pendant lights. A semi-transparent yellow banner is overlaid on the right side of the image, containing a red circular bullet point and text.
- If you really analyze it and doubt the usefulness, then stop creating it

- Never develop features no one is going to use
- Doing anything out of bounds is abusing the power given to you

- Relate every feature in the product to some user research
- Don't be afraid to remove features from the backlog even after a sprint review if you later find out that they are useless or business value has changed

In Summary

- Do not include unnecessary features
