

PRINCIPLES TO REMEMBER

1

Active user participation is important and non-negotiable

Scrum Framework

2

The developers must be nurtured to be decision makers

3

Obligations and conditions change but the sprint timescale remains consistent

- ▶ Responsibilities and other conditions

● Timeboxed

4

Requirements must be captured at a high level, which is both lightweight and visual

Methods:

- User Stories,
- High level vision statements
- Storyboards

To be explained

5

There must be development of small releases, which are augmentable and can be redone

- Individual iterations or sprints will lead to the complete product

6

Focus must be placed on regular delivery of products

Releases are developed in each sprint

Release to the live environment as often as possible/necessary

7

Completion of each feature before moving on to the next is paramount

8

Apply the 80/20 rule

This rule is also known as the Pareto principle

Very little work

Maximum benefits

20% Effort

80% Results

9

Testing must be incorporated throughout the project development process.

● There must be early and regular testing implemented

10

Active user participation is important and non-
negotiable

The sprint review is one event that allows stakeholders a formal opportunity to feedback.

(more on this later)

In Summary

- 1- Active user participation is important and non-negotiable
- 2- The developers must be nurtured to be decision makers
- 3- Obligations and conditions change but the sprint timescale remains consistent
- 4- Requirements must be captured at a high level, which is both lightweight and visual
- 5- There must be development of small releases, which are augmentable and can be redone
- 6- Focus must be placed on regular delivery of products
- 7- Completion of each feature before moving on to the next is paramount
- 8- Apply the 80/20 rule
- 9- Testing must be incorporated throughout the project development process.
- 10- Active user participation is important and non-negotiable